A STRANGE PROPHECY.

BY CARL RAYMOND.

Is there a power by which any human being can foretell a special event? This is a question we have never been able to decide. Reason always tells us no—facts sometimes answer yes. We reason that no special and peculiar event can be predicted with certainty as to time and place, because it implies, through all the millions of chances against its happening, that this minute result was planned and ordained long before the time for its accomplishment had an existence; and not only so planned and ordained, but that this knowledge of that special future was conveyed to a finite or limited mind. And this, if a fact, again implies that not only that event was specially ordered, but that the millions of apparent chances against its happening were also ordered to complete that trivial result. And then, going a step beyond this again, it follows that if these millions of contingencies were so arranged as to produce that event, other millions, with the millions of multiplis of millions, were pre-arranged to force a certain result of each apparent contingency—so that, in summing up, we can have no contingency at all, but only a foreordaining of trifles from the beginning of motion. This, it will be readily perceived, destroys all idea of any chance, or any free agency.

To bring this matter forcibly home to the most obtuse perception, let us consider a simple illustration. General laws or destinies we are in some degree able to understand. We know that the general laws of man's being give him three-score years and ten; but we find that what we call contingencies cut off millions on millions before arriving at this age—while they carry thousands beyond—the very fewest number indeed ending exactly at the given time of the supposed general law. So if we take any thing else—a tree for instance. We comprehend the general law of its life, growth and duration. Now suppose that a tree, with its infant stem yet sprouting from the earth in the midst of a dark and unexplored forest, be destined to perish by the woodman's ax in exactly one hundred and fifty-six years, three months, thirteen days, ten hours, fifty-seven minutes, and three seconds, (for if the event is minutely ordained, the time must also be as minutely,) it follows that a man, also having a minute destiny, must also be born, perhaps more than a hundred years later, and it may be thousands of miles away, who must, in spite of all apparent chances to the contrary, be there at a fixed second of his own eventful life, to give the destructive blows. Can any sound reason support such a theory as this?

But then again, on the other side, we have thousands of recorded facts, which prove, with all the strength that can be given to human testimony, that predictions have been made, and verified to the letter, respecting most unlikely events; and that scenes in the future have been so vividly and accurately portrayed in the present, that their subsequent fulfilment has left every contemplative mind staggered under a weight of a wonderous mystery. We could cite numerous instances of this character which have either come under our own personal observation or that of some of our immediate friends; but our present purpose is to give an illustrative scene from history, and leave the reader to his own reflections.

"One dark, gloomy night, during the Reign of Terror in France, three roughly-dressed men were picking their way through the narrow, ill-lighted streets of one of the poorer quarters of Paris.

"I have no faith in anything of the kind," said one.

"Neither have I," responded one of the others.

"Nor I," added the third.

"I believe only in the guillotine," said the first speaker.

"That is the salvation of France and ourselves," returned the second.

"The only Savior to which we should do homage," impiously rejoined the third.

"But this woman, they say, has done some very shrewd guessing," resumed the first speaker.

"Most women have," laughed the second.

"But she had better be careful what she guesses to-night," sternly added the third, "or she may find the shortest road to the scaffold!"

"Bah! what shall we care for her?" sneered the first speaker.

"Nothing, Jean, of course, and therefore she might as well die for the good of France. What say you, Maximilian?"

"That her low birth scarcely entitles her to so much notice," answered the second speaker. "We want the blood of aristocrats, not of the common people."

"Well, here we are," said the one called Jean. "This is the Rue de Tournon, and here we have number five. Silence! not a word, to give her any clue. She may know us; but, if not, we shall try her guessing powers."

As he spoke he knocked at the door of what appeared to be a humble dwelling, and almost immediately it was opened by a servant.

"We want to see Citoyenne Lenormand," said the one called Jean, and who seemed to be the principal personage of the three.

"Enter, Citoyens," replied the servant, ushering them into a small room, plainly furnished, and fitted up somewhat in the style of a respectable library, with a few volumes upon some shelves on one side of the apartment.

Scarcely had they seated themselves when an inner door opened, and a little fat, dumpy woman, with keen, blue eyes, and a round ruddy face, about which clustered a profusion of curls, from a vulgar, flaxen wig, entered with an awkward courtesy, and a quick-spoken:

"Good evening."

The three men, without deigning a reply, stared hard at her for a few moments, and then burst out into a broad, coarse laugh of ridicule, which caused her ruddy face to redden deeply, and her eyes to flash with something of anger and resentment.

These three worthies, as seen by the dim light of a lamp standing on a table, did not present a very prepossessing appearance. The one called Jean had a big head, with a coarse, brutal face, and lank body, with a withered and sallow skin. The features of Maxamilian were finer and more regularly formed; but his forehead was narrow and sloping, and the general expression full of vanity, cunning and wickedness. The third, with dank, matted hair, growing low upon his forehead and half concealing his face, had the gloomy, sullen, heartless look of a natural ruffian. As before said, all three were roughly and slovenly attired.

"What is your pleasure, citoyens?" inquired the little fat woman, smothering her anger.

"If you are the witch people say you are, you ought to know," said Jean with a sneering grin.

"But I am no witch," replied Mademoiselle Lenormand, as she approached the table and threw down upon it a pack of rather dirty cards.

"But you tell fortunes?"

"Sometimes."

"Well, tell ours, and mind you tell the truth—that is if the devil will let you!"

"A few questions first," said the fortune teller, evidently not very well pleased with the appearance of her visitors. "For what flower do each of you have a preference?"

"For myself, none!" replied Jean. I hate flowers, as being fit only for sickly children and sentimental women."

A laugh from the others greeted this response, in which they acknowledged they both concurred.

"That is strange!" said the fortune-teller, keenly examining all three; "not to like a single flower! Well, then, which animal do you like best? and which do you detest most?"

"I like the tiger best," answered Jean.

"Give us the tiger!" responded both of the others.

"It is a fierce and bloody beast!" said the fortune-teller.

"But a brave one forsooth!" rejoined Jean. "I hate your timid, trembling hare!"

"And I," said Maximilian.

"And I" echoed his friend.

"You seem to agree in your likes and dislikes!" said the woman. "Will you have your fortunes told together or separately?"

"Oh please yourself. We shall be easily satisfied, not expecting more than one word in ten to be true."

"Let me see the palms of your hands!" said Mademoiselle Lenormand.

She looked at each hand, as it was extended toward the light, and turned deadly pale.

"Well, what is the matter?" asked Jean, perceiving the marked change in her countenance.

"I would rather not tell your fortunes!" she replied in some agitation.

"Bah! go on—have no fear—speak out—give us any doom you please!"

"You have excited our curiosity," said Maximilian," and must now satisfy it."

She caught up the cards, shuffled them hurriedly, and then requested each to cut with his left hand. She then ran through the cards, and became more agitated every moment.

"Will you hold me innocent of wishing you any wrong?" she asked, in a low, tremulous tone.

"Oh certainly."

"You force me to speak, remember! and I must speak the truth or be silent."

"Go on!" said Jean; "why should you have more fear than we?"

Still the fortune-teller hesitated, and ran through the cards again.

"The same fate repeated!" she muttered to herself.

"Woman, you trifle with our time!" said Maxamilian.

"I will do so no longer, then," returned Mademoiselle Lenormand. "I will speak now, and the truth. Citoyens, you wield a terrible power, and from the pages of history your names will never be erased. For a time, millions will applaud your every act—but a fearful future is before you all. You, turning to Jean, "will reach the summit of your proudest ambition, and be the master of life; your slightest wish will be law, and your most courageous foes will tremble at the bare mention of your name. But in the pride of your power you will suddenly be cut off by the dagger of an assassin, and yet be more worshipped in your death than your life, with the spontaneous voice of a nation to glorify and deify the name you bear. You," turning to Maximilian, "will outlive your friend, and in some degree take his place in the hearts of the people; but your reign will be short, your friends will suddenly be converted into foes, and, amid the execrations of a furious people, you will lift your hand against your own life, yet lift it vain, because the reeking scaffold must claim you as a victim. And now," turning to the last of the trio, "it only remains for me to add, that your life blood will mingle with the last of your friends, and your gory head join theirs in death! I have done."

The three men now exchanged glances, and then burst forth in a loud, mocking laugh.

"This is a miserable farce!" said Jean. "As if I could be honored after death, and you execrated!"

"She slanders the good citoyens, and should be made to answer for it at the tribunal!" observed the one whose fate had been told last.

"Bah!" sneered Maximilian; why waste a thought upon one who is certainly no sorceress! Come," he added, flinging a small purse on the table, "let us go."

Those three men departed to fulfill the doom predicted.

The one called Jean was no other than Jean Paul Marat, afterward assassinated in his bath by Charlotte Corday, and deified by the nation. The second was Maximilian Robespierre, who, after attempting to blow out his brains, lived to be dragged to the same scaffold from which he had sent so many innocent victims to eternity. The third personage was his bosom friend, St. Just, who perished with him, amid the hootings and revilings of the same ferocious mob who had so often cheered them on in their bloody deeds.

Mademoiselle Lenormand, though imprisoned and doomed at the time of Robespierre's death, continued her vocation through the Directory, Consulate, Empire, and for many a long year after the Bourbon Restoration. She amassed a fortune of five hundred thousand francs. She was consulted by the Emperor Napoleon, the Empress Josephine, the Emperor Alexander, Louis XVIII., and nearly all the crowned heads of Europe; by Prince Talleyrand, Madame de Stael, Madame Tallien, Barriere, Fouche, and thousands of others, many of whose names are on the pages of history. She predicted the disaster of the Russian campaign and the divorce of Josephine—the fall of Napoleon and the restoration of the Bourbons. In fact, her prophesies would fill a volume, and we do not know that a single noted failure was ever recorded against her. She lived to a good old age, and died in 1843. Certainly a very remarkable woman!—Oriental Casket.

Hints for Farmers—Household and Garden.
Our Receipt for Curing Meat.

As the season has arrived when curing meat is in order, we republish as of old, our famous receipt for curing beef, pork, mutton, hams, &c., as follows:

To one gallon of water, take 1½ pounds of salt, ½ pound of sugar, ½ ounce of saltpetre, ½ ounce of potash. Omit the potash unless you can obtain the pure article. All druggists keep it.

In this ratio the pickle can be increased to any quality desired. Let these be boiled together until all the dirt from the sugar rises to the top and is skimmed off. Then throw it into a tub to cool, and when cold pour it over your beef or pork. The meat must be well covered with pickle, and should not be put down for at least two days after killing, during which time it should be slightly sprinkled with powdered saltpetre, which removes all the surface blood, &c., leaving the meat fresh and clean. Some omit boiling the pickle, and find it to answer well, though the operation of boiling purifies the pickle by throwing off the dirt always to be found in salt and sugar. If this receipt is strictly followed, it will require only a single trial to prove its superiority over the common way or most ways of putting down meat, and will not soon be abandoned for any other. The meat is unsurpassed for sweetness, delicacy and freshness of color.

LOOK TO THE IMPLEMENTS.

We desire, at this season of the year, to say that it is a lamentable fact that many farmers lose as much from a want of proper care of implements and machinery as from the actual wear-and-tear of them. Repeated wetting and drying injure, sooner or later, any kind of wood work; the moisture getting into the cracks soon begins the work of decay. This may be prevented by the timely and occasional application of some cheap paint. Much has been said and written upon the value of tool-houses, and it is hardly necessary for us to add our mite to the general array; but providing a tool house is not all that should be done, if the shovels, spades and forks are brought into it with the dirt sticking to them, and in that condition are allowed to remain through the winter, or until they are again needed. All practical farmers know how much better a bright plow turns the furrow, how much easier it is on the team and driver, and yet they will bring their plows and harrows in every fall with the dirt thick upon them, and let them be so until again wanted, entailing a great deal of injury.

There are various mixtures which might be applied to the iron to prevent rusting, the cheapest of which is common (unsalted) grease. A better article may be found by melting together six pounds of flesh (not salted) lard and two of rosin. An old iron pot is a good thing to keep and compound the mixture in. As soon as a tool is done being used for the season, clean it off and give it a coat of this mixture, and even if it remains undisturbed for years, it will come out as bright as when put away. Implements properly cared for will not only last nearly twice as long as when this is not the case, but, as we said before, they are far better in every way.

PRESERVING GARDEN FLOWERS.

The time has come when we shall have to part with many garden pets which have given us so much pleasure during the growing season. Such partings always bring regret; and in spite of "nowhere to keep them," people will try if something cannot be done at anyrate. It is believed that it is not so much the degree of cold which kills usually hardy plants, as it is the drying influences of a very cold atmosphere, and hence many find a very little covering sufficient to save plants, if the covering be such as to keep them from drying out.

We know, for instance, that a raspberry or a grape vine, which would probably be destroyed if left above ground in its natural way, can be safely preserved by being buried just beneath the surface; and it is found that roses bent over to the ground and covered with earth, so shaped as to throw off the water, will enable rather tender kinds to get through the winter unscathed. A friend once told us that verbenas were much hardier than people supposed. He put dry leaves over the bed and then covered the leaves with a board, and they did not injure by the hardest frost.

We should suppose, however, that green succulent matter would rot by confinement, as well as hard wood get injured by frost; and we would suggest to all who may be disposed to preserve anything in this way the importance of cutting away half-ripe wood or succulent green foliage before entombing the plants for winter.

Pampas grasses, the ostrich feather-like spikes of which are so commonly seen in gardens, cause much discussion as to the best means to protect. Some take them up and put them into a tub of earth and keep them in a cool cellar; but those who succeed in keeping them over winter in the open ground have finer plants and larger and more numerous spikes. Some of our neighbors turn a barrel over the stocks to keep out the water, filling in dry leaves all about the plant; and though sometimes the plants will be lost treated in this way, generally it is a success. The "rocket" plant does well on either of the plans named for the pampas grass.

Dahlias, tuberoses, gladiolus and such like summer flowering roots, there is no trouble with. All they require is to be taken up as soon as the first frost has injured their flowers and spoiled their blossoming for the season, and after drying a little put them in some moderate cool and dry place secure from the frost.

THE SUGAR-BEET.

The department of agriculture at Washington appears to have ascertained that the prizes of money offered by the department to stimulate the production of the sugar-beet and Chinese sorghum in this country were made without authority from Congress and were therefore illegal, Payments have, therefore, been suspended for the present, and in all probability the matter will be acted upon at the ensuing session of Congress and favorably. We do not ourselves entertain any high expectations of valuable results being likely to be reached by stimulants of that sort. Still, we always regard with favor any and all efforts made by the department of agriculture to encourage the production of saccharine crops in the United States. As regards the sugar beet, it is rather a reproach upon the enterprise of Northern agriculture that the Mormon colony in the territory of Utah, under the rigorous despotism of Brigham Young, succeeded in producing its own supply of domestic sugar from the beet 20 years in advance of any successful effort in the same way in any of the Atlantic states. This was done before the opening of the Pacific railroad, and at a time when the Mormon prophet was despotically bent upon making the Mormon community entirely independent and self-sustaining. The example thus set has since been slowly imitated by voluntary enterprise in the states of Delaware, New Jersey, Indiana, Illinois and Main, with irregular and varying results. Perhaps the case would have been different but for the unfortunate attempt of the department of agriculture to force a sudden development of the sugar production on an immense scale by means of a rapid and widespread cultivation of the Chinese sorghum, which proved a lamentable failure. Since that date the department has given encouragement to efforts at sugar-making from Indian corn and other crops, the general effect of which has been to weaken the culture of the sugar-beet and of the tropical sugar cane, respecting the saccharine properties of which staples there has never been any doubt whatever. Our own judgment is that if the attention of the country as regards sugar making could be concentrated upon those two crops — the one for the Gulf states and the other for the North and West—the result would be far more gratifying than could possibly be attained in any other way. The consumption of sugar in the United States is enormous, and as a vast majority of it is imported from foreign countries, which take but little merchandise from us in return, this one article has mostly to be paid for by shipments in American gold and silver, a process entirely too one sided to be at all pleasant or profitable. — Germantown Telegraph.

Recipes.

POTATO PUFF.—Two cups of cold mashed potatoes; two cups of cold cooked meat chopped very fine, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, two eggs, well beaten; one cup of milk; pour in a deep dish and bake in a quick oven.

BUTTER TOAST.—Allow a table spoonful of butter for each slice of bread; melt the butter by very gentle heat; toast the bread to an even light brown color, lay it in a chafing dish, or in a thin china dish set in a larger dish containing hot water, and pour the melted butter over it. Serve it hot as it is made.

PEAR PIE.—Pear pie is a delicacy not often seen on our tables, and yet late pears that do not soften until after they have been picked for sometime make very nice pies. Make a thin, rich crust—by rich I do not mean greasy; slice the pears, sprinkle sugar over them, and put in a few small lumps of butter; add, if you please, a very little cinnamon or mace. Bake with an upper crust.

PICKELED EGGS.—Boil a dozen eggs quite hard, remove the shells without breaking the eggs, and pack them in glass jars. While the eggs are being boiled put over the fire in a porcelain-lined kettle one quart of vinegar, one level teaspoonful each of whole cloves, allspice and prpper corns, and one tablespoonful of mustard. Let the vinegar and spices become scalding hot, and then pour them over the eggs, and close the jars at once.

FRITTERS OR PANCAKES.—Two eggs well beaten, a half cupful sugar, a fourth cupful molasses, two-thirds cupful of milk, a teaspoonful butter or lard, an even teaspoonful soda, a half-teaspoonful each of salt and of mixed clove and cinnamon, flour to make a batter that will just drop from the spoon; and have the lard hot, dip the spoon into it, and then take a small spoonful of the batter and drop it in; repeat the process until you have as many as the fry-kettle will accommodate; fry moderately that they may be done through and a nice brown; serve warm with coffee or cheese.

Hadn't Got the Hang of the School House.

A Democrat who heard something awful good in the City hall the other morning started for Woodward avenue with his hat in his hand. Meeting a stranger at the gate, he swung his tile and called out:

"We've met 'em!"

"Yes."

"And won a glorious victory!"

Yes."

"It is the biggest tidal wave ever heard of!"

"Just so."

"And it will sweep the Republican party off its feet!"

"It will."

"And give us a Democratic President!"

"I believe it."

"Then let's give three cheers!"

"I—I—that's a little too much."

"How—why? Ain't she glorious?"

"Yes, but you see I was a Republican up to midnight last night, and it might not be in good taste for me to utter any Democrate yells before to-morrow. I'm with you—I'm all right—but give me a little more time to get used to the new party.

A Chinese Garden.

A correspondent of Vick's Magazine, writing from China, says: I wish to tell you something of the beauties of this land. There are those who think there can be no beauty here, yet the people themselves call their country the Flowery Kingdom. Could your readers take a climb over the hills here at any time of the year, if they are lovers of flowers and ferns, their eyes would be feasted and their hearts made happy. What can be more lovely than, in early spring, to see these hills covered with the lovely azaleas? Mr. Fortune, a traveler in China and collector of botanical specimens, says: "Most people have seen and admired the beautiful azaleas which are brought to the Chiswick fetes, and which, as individual specimens, surpass in most instances those which grow and bloom on their native hills; but few can form any idea of the gorgeous and striking beauty of these azalea-clad mountains, where, on every side, as far as our vision extends, the eye rests on masses of flowers of dazzling brightness and surpassing beauty."

Then, too, there are the honeysuckles (wild ones,) clematis and the fragrant glycine; these all climbing among the hedges and on trees, hanging their pretty flowers over the mountain paths and filling the air with fragrance. There, too, are the many ivies, so kindly overgrowing and covering up all unsightly objects, making them instead objects of beauty. Tucked away in among the rocks are the pretty ferns, so beautiful, so cool-looking; not the least attractive among these is the climbing fern.

I do not want you to think this list contains the names of all the pretty flowers to be found here among the hills. There are many others for which, not being a botanist, I have no name. There are many, too, that I have not seen, for there are other plants here which require most of my time, native plants, too, not as attractive looking, perhaps, but more precious in the eyes of their Heavenly Father. These require our time; the other nice flowers are only for our recreation hours. There are still other flowers we can enjoy at all times, having them in our own yard. Of these I will write at another time. I send you a photograph of a portion of a Chinese flower garden, where, as may be perceived, water is made a very important feature.

Though their gardens are not arranged according to our Western plan, yet they are places of beauty, and it is surprising how much beauty and variety they can have in so small a space. There is no smoothly-shaven lawn, no babbling brook, no fountains, but most of the space is taken up in buildings, tea houses fitted up with pretty Chinese pictures, colored glass windows, mirrors and screens, and a few foreign, curious singing birds and fragrant flowers. Here in the pleasantest weather the Chinese men and a few women sit and enjoy their tea and little dishes of fancy desserts, and a good long chat with their friends, their eyes being feasted by the beauties outside of running vines and pretty flowers that fill the air with their fragrance.

Outside of these tea houses, which are connected together by curiously winding passages, ornamented here and there with quaint carvings and odd figures, is what accords more with our ideas of a garden, and it is a place of beauty; still I think a Western gardener could improve it much. Here is a pond crossed by zigzag bridges, a large stagnant pool, a thing of beauty when covered with the large, cool lotus leaves, with its large bright pink and its pure white flowers; but before these appear there is no beauty there, for the water is so murky that it is only occasionly that one can catch a glimpse of the little gold fish with which it is filled. The sides, though, are covered with pretty overhanging vines and ferns and bushes.

The rockeries are old and pretty. They are not merely piles of stone, but display ingenious masonry, representing a cave, with many winding passage ways. If one starts in he is surprised at its many windings, which, of course, make it appear much longer than it really is, and wonders if he will never reach the other end, or find himself again at the place of starting, for at one time he is led by his guide to the top, getting a glimpse of light, then down, and still deeper down in the dark, in and out, back and through, zigzag, and every conceivable way, always a new path, and never retraversing those already passed, until at last he has passed through all. Vines grow so readily here that walls and stones are so

THE COLUMBIAN.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1882

Thomas Beaver of Danville, has given $30,000 towards $100,000 needed for Dickinson College at Carlisle, Pa.

After the 1st of January Judge Mercur will become Chief Justice in place of Chief Justice Sharswood whose official term expires on the 31st of December.

The short session of the Forty-seventh congress, will convene on the first Monday of December, and terminate upon the evening of the third day of next March.

It is reported that Senator Beck intends to put himself on the reform side of congress next session by offering a resolution to do away with the usual Christmas vacation. He wants congress to "buckle down to revenue and civil service reform."

Senators Gordon and Kennedy, of Philadelphia, favor the plan of the democrats uniting with the independent republicans in electing officers of the state senate. The latter says if Stewart is a candidate for president pro tem he will vote for him.

Representative Cox proposes to offer in Congress, at the earliest opportunity, a resolution calling on the Secretary of War to report how much of the river and harbor appropriation is unexpended, and then moving that the unexpended sum be paid back in the treasury.

Surgeon-General Barnes and Dr. Woodward, two of the attending physicians at the bedside of the late President Garfield, are now nearing the dividing line that separates them from eternity. The former is dying with Bright's disease and the latter with softening of the brain.

E. P. Kisner, of Hazleton, publicly says that he is not an aspirant for the chief clerkship of the house of representatives, and that he is not entitled to the appointment, and furthermore he hopes that the Democratic members of the legislature will have the foresight to select men with special ability for the offices to be filled.

THE ATTORNEY GENERALSHIP.

In the selection of his cabinet, Governor-elect Pattison ought not to be hampered in any way, and if we understand his character he will not be dictated to, nor influenced by appeals from any quarter that ask for the appointment of this one and that one, because they are good party workers, or to repay them for services rendered in the campaign. Whoever he selects as his assistants and advisers will be chosen with caution, and because of their eminent fitness for the positions to which they will be called. Among those whose names have been suggested for the office of Attorney-General is that of Hon. Charles R. Buckalew, and his appointment would be a source of great gratification not only to the people of this county, but all over the State. The fact that Columbia county stands sixth in the list of forty-eight counties that gave Pattison pluralities, gives us no special claim. But as we present a gentleman whose reputation as a lawyer and statesman extends throughout the Union, his appointment would be considered as a recognition of the ability of a great man, as well as of the staunch Democracy of this county, which through good report and evil report, have stood by their colors. The selection of Mr. Buckalew would meet with universal approval, and the confidence of the people would be still further assured to the new administration, by the knowledge that the business of the chief law officer of the state is intrusted in the hands of such a man. Other able lawyers have also been named for the position, and it is sure that whoever receives the appointment will be fully competent to discharge its duties, yet we know of no man in the State who possesses the necessary qualifications to a greater degree than does the Hon. Charles R. Buckalew.

President's Message.

THE ABOLITION OF ALL TAXES TO BE REQUESTED EXCEPT THOSE ON TOBACCO AND DISTILLED LIQUORS.

It is believed in Washington that Commissioner Raum in his annual report will recommend such a reduction in internal revenue taxes as will leave the aggregate income of the government from this source about $100,000,000 per annum. It is known that the President, while he is firmly opposed to any proposition looking to the abolition, at this time, of the entire internal revenue system, believes that the time has come when substantial relief can safely be accorded the tax issues of the country, and that a portion of this relief should come from the reduction of internal revenue taxation. With this view the members of the Cabinet are in entire accord, and the President in his forthcoming message to Congress will recommend the abolition of all internal revenue taxes except those on tobacco in its various forms and upon distilled spirits and fermented liquors, and except also the special tax upon the manufacturers and dealers in such articles, with a reduction in the tax upon whisky and passed the House of Representatives at the last session of Congress. The retention of the special tax is deemed essential to afford the officers of the government a proper supervision of these articles for the prevention of frauds. If this recommendation be adopted the remaining sources of internal revenue will yield acerding to the estimate of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue about $100,000,000 per annum. Any further reduction on internal revenue than the proposed would compel the government to rely almost entirely upon import duties for its necessary income and would render any revision or reduction of tariff duties dangerous if not impossible. The President is firmly opposed to the adoption of any policy that would create such contingency and will in his forthcoming message urge upon Congress the importance of immediate revision of the tariff with a view to reducing the aggregate income of the government to such an amount as is absolutely required to meet the interest on the public debt and the current and ordinary expenses of the government.

Dismissed From Service.

The president has directed the removal of Charles E. Henry, marshall of the District of Columbia ;D. B. Ainger, post-master, and Myron M. Parker, assistant post master, for the city of Washington; M. D. Helm, foreman of the Congressional Record, and George E. Spencer, director of the Union Pacific railroad company, upon charges made by the attorney general and Colonel Bliss with having interferred with the ends of justice in connection with the Star route trials. These offices will all be filled immediately, so that there may be no interruption to the public service. To prevent any possible embarrassment in the affairs of the marshall's office the suspension of that officer will be withheld until his successor is appointed. In his report to the president Attorney General Brewster says that it is his opinion that the ends of justice have been interferred with by all complained of by Mr. Bliss, Mr. Merrick, and Mr. Ker.

Spending the People's Money.

The latest sensation in Washington is over the newly furnished and decorated rooms of Attorney-General Brewster in the Department of Justice. The furniture and decorations have all been made from designs specially prepared for Messrs. W. B. Moses & Son of that city, in pursuance of an order from Attorney General Brewster himself, with carte blanche to make the rooms perfect. The principal room, the one used by the Attorney-General to transact official business, is furnished with ebony chairs and lounges covered with the finest morocco leather, and said to be the most elegant and costly suit of furniture in Washington. The centre table, designed and made to order, is a gem of its kind. Although measuring only six feet by four, it cost $100. The smaller tables are also elegantly furnished, and strictly in keeping with the central one.

The carpet in this room, consisting of a Turkish rug, cost the Government $1,200. To walk upon it makes one imagine himself to be treading on down. To complete this there is also a rich, fleecy rug costing $150.

But the most gorgeous adornments in this room are the curtains. They are made of the finest silk plush, rich and dazzling in texture; lined and interlined with fine Turkish satine, with cardinal cords and tassels. The brass rods, holders, and other accessories are equally elaborate in pattern, and were especially designed for the Department of Justice. There are four windows in this, and, as the price paid for each pair of curtains was $300,the cost is $1,200 for curtains alone.

The Attorney-General's private office, his sanctum sanctorum, is certainly remarkable for splendor and elegance. Turkish carpet and rugs, handsome Oriental furniture covered with French velours, with silk plush trimmings, and elaborate frescoing and fine pictures make this a most luxurious room. The Attorney-General's expensive tastes have already cost the taxpayers over $5000,and by the time the innumerable additions and finishing touches are given to these offices, making them what he designed they should be, the cost will reach $10,000. But to whose advantage is all this?

Pattison's Cabnet.

The Pattison Cabinet is freely discussed among the politicians now, and speculation is rife among the Democratic leaders as to how the new administration is to be organized. It is credibly stated that Ex-Assistant District Attorney John R. Reed was first the leading man for Secretary of the Commonwealth, but Cassidy then loomed up for Attorney General, and that halted Reed in the race. The Secretaryship then wandered westward, according to current rumor, and struck Malcom Hay, of Allegheny, but he is not in harmony with Cassidy, and he is now regarded as having placed himself out of the range of Cabinet honors. It is hinted that he would have accepted the Attorney Generalship, but not the Secretaryship. There is a matter of four thousand dollars difference in the salary of the two positions—the Secretaryship being worth including fees, about $7,000 per annum, and the Attorney Generalship, $11,000.

The latest rumor that is rapidly crystalizing into Democratic belief, is that Ex-Congressman William S. Stenger, of Chambersburg, is likely to be tendered the Secretaryship of the Commonwealth, and that the Attorney Generalship oscillates between Lewis C. Cassidy, of this city, Charles R. Buckalew, of Columbia, and George A. Jenks, of Jefferson. All are strong and experienced lawyers. There is formidable opposition to Cassidy in his own party in this city, and all the Senatorial candidates for 1885 would look with suspicion upon his appointment to the Pattison Cabinet. Mr. Cassidy has not avowed his desire to be appointed, and it is possible that he may solve the problem by declining altogether, in which case it is believed that Buckalew would have more than an even chance for winning.—Times.

Pattison Thanks Hensel.

THE GOVERNOR-ELECT TO THE CHAIRMAN OF THE DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

Governor-elect Pattison has written a letter to W. U. Hensel, Esq., chairman of the Democratic State Committee, in which he says:

As the returns of election become fairly complete, I cannot examine them without feeling it my duty to express, through you, my extreme satisfaction with the organization of the party in the last campaign. The vote in the Democratic counties of the State, as well as the general result, attests the excellence of the party organization. I desire to thank, through you, the Democratic county chairmen and committeemen for their faithful and beneficial services. To you as the head of the general organization I extend my personal congratulations upon the successful issue of the campaign to which you so largely contributed by your intelligent direction and tireless energy. I cannot forget, and want publicly to thank the intelligent and efficient gentlemen associated with you as your secretaries for their valuable contribution in achieving the victory.

In a letter returning thanks for Mr. Pattison's generous expressions, Mr. Hensel says:

The election of all the State nominees by large pluralities, the poll for yourself of 88,000 more votes than were ever before cast for a Democratic candidate for governor and more than were ever before returned for the candidate of any party for a State office in Pennsylvania, have not only vindicated the wisdom of the State convention in its choice, but they have emphatically attested the fidelity of the party to its nominees.

The Iron Industry.

EXAGGERATED REPORTS OF THE TEMPORARY DEPRESSION.

The iron manufacturers of Pittsburg in general do not agree with eastern manufacturers who are disposed to indulge in gloomy speculations in steel trade. A large number of the most prominent manufacturers were interviewed and none anticipated any serious break. The mills there are all doing a fair business and while none are rushed with orders every pound of iron now being manufactured is being consumed. The nail trade is generally dull at this period but now on the contrary the nail manufacturers are very busy and plenty of orders coming in. In regard to the Bessemer scare a prominent manufacturer stated that there was a good profit in Bessemer rails at forty cents per ton, reports to the contrary notwithstanding, and that the rails could be made for $32, leaving $8 of a margin for profit. B. F. Keating, Vice-President of the Iron Association' speaking on the same subject, says the Bessemer men had made large profits, but now when an over production had come, they find their profits lessened and their first object is to reduce the price of labor. In order to do this they are endeavoring to show that the entire bottom has dropped out of the business. Another point they have is to influence legislation and prevent any further reduction of rates on steel rails.

Buried in the Snow.

HOW ENGINEER MELVILLE FOUND THE BODIES OF DELONG AND HIS COMPANIONS.

Chief Engineer Melville resumed his narrative before the Jeannette Board of Enquiry, describing the final expedition which resulted in finding the bodies of De Long and his companions. In the first place it was necessary to travel to Jamavalock in quest of provisions, as the Russian traders, having learned of the expedition, had bought up all the fish. With Ninderman and the interpreter, Mr. Melville then proceeded to Usterda. He was anxious to find the hut in which Erricksen had died, but after two days of ineffectual search he was compelled by a storm to return to Kaskarta. When the storm cleared up witness started Bartlett with his party to Matvai, with instructions to work northward, while witness would work from the northward to the southward. After several days of travel Mr. Melville found some sticks stuck in the sand and a Remington rifle fastened to the sticks. Some distance further he found the dead bodies of Captain De Long, Dr. Ambler and Ah Sam, the cook, buried in the snow. Captain De Long's arm extended out of the snow. Just behind De Long were two ice hooks, as though he had tried to throw them as far as possible upon high ground. A fire had been built at the spot. Ninderman helped Mr. Melville pry up the bodies, which were frozen in the snow. Upon rolling the body of Dr. Ambler over, witness found under it the pistol which Captain De Long had carried upon his person all through the march. The pistol had apparently been held in Dr. Ambler's right hand. This led witness to believe that De Long had died before Dr. Ambler, and that the latter had taken the pistol to protect the bodies from any stray fox or wolf, or to shoot any animal that might offer a hope for food. Witness ordered the natives to continue digging in the snow bank. Just before night the head of one man and the feet of another were exposed. Soon the men engaged in digging threw out a box of books, some cooking utensils, etc., and after a while exposed the shoulders of a third man. Witness returned to the camp at Matvai, which was distant about twenty versts, leaving instructions to Ninderman and Bartlett to be extremely particular to preserve every scrap of paper or relic of any kind, and to bring with them to the camp that evening all the bodies they might succeed in digging out. When they returned to Matvai that evening Bartlett and Ninderman brought in the bodies of De Long, Dr. Ambler, Ah Sam, Gartz and two others. The bodies were covered with clothes and protected.

ALMOST AS BAD.

What the perplexed Physicians do in Cases of Emergency.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor. "Bright's Disease bothers the medical man almost as badly as cancer does. Having passed a certain stage, both point straight to eternity. It may be unprofessional to let out the secret, but whenever a patient comes to me with Bright's Disease, or any Kidney trouble acting like it, I tell him to put on BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The Capcine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped, the Capcine will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of the plaster? If so, you are all right. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Highest awards. Dec 1-4 w

AT WANAMAKER'S

Visitors to Philadelphia are invited to visit the store, whether to see or to buy. Your parcels are checked; a waiting-room is provided, where you may rest with ladies and children; guides conduct you through the house, or you wander at will; there are many things of interest to see, and a welcome.

For two years, perhaps, we have had the richest, largest, most varied and most exhaustive collection of dress-goods in Philadelphia. Before that, we may have had the largest, and even the most exhaustive, but perhaps not the richest. The slowest trade to come to a new merchant is the trade of luxury. It is the slowest to change from one to another. But it does change.

We may say our dress-goods of all sorts are at about their highest now.

Second and third circles, south-east from center.

Silks of all sorts have come; and never were silks more acceptable. And these words have a meaning here beyond any they could have elsewhere; because of the greater variety of wants that look to us for supply. We must have all accepted styles, and all the approved qualities of those styles; and, as to colors, can you think of one that we can do without?

A store that has only one class of trade can get along with comparatively few silks. Which stock would you rather buy out of?

Two damask towels at 15 and 18 cents may serve to show what we gain by buying of the makers. The very same towels are in the wholesale trade in New York at about 21 and 22 cents, which means at least 25 cents at retail.

We are not going to say that all our retail prices are below New York wholesale; nothing of the sort. "More than one swallow to make a summer." But where such towels are to be got for 15 cents is a good place to look for bed and table-linen, and all the other linens. That's what we mean exactly; it's true, too.

Outer circle, City hall square entrance.

A very wide and surprisingly good navy-blue twilled flannel for 50 cents; 45-inch.

Do you remember a 35-cent flannel for 25 cents, of which we had 18,000 yards last fall? Afterward we got 7,000 yards more of it; and a little of it is left yet. That is 23-inch. This wide flannel is fully as good as that.

Third circle, southeast from center.

All the warmer sorts of underwear are ready; for men, women and children; thick-cotton, merino, wool, and silk. All the sorts needed for all sorts of people with all sorts of notions; and, for people who want it, there is quite a little wit about underwear to be picked up at the counter. Where else would you look for it? Not in books surely; for goods are changing all the time; and so get ahead of books.

West of Arcade, 1218 Chestnut; west counter.

The taxidermist of Lehigh University at Bethlehem is at work stuffing a snowy owl or harfang shot near Scranton recently. This species of the owl is a native of the Arctic regions and is seldom found so far south. Its presence here is said to be a sure indication of a hard winter. The harfang is white, with very small brown spots on the back and wings. The wings measure over four feet from tip to tip.

Torrence, secretary of the Pennsylvania bible society, his nephew, a lad of eight, and four men in his employ, while driving home from Danville last Saturday evening in a spring wagon were precipitated down an embankment by the shying of the horse. The present Stalwart bugaboo about the depression in the iron industries does not seem to worry in the least the capitalists of Danville. Last week a company was organized to be known as the Danville Nail Manufacturing Company, and capital stock subscribed to the amount of $75,000. The directors are D. M. Boyd, S. A. Vanalen, R. M. Knorr & Wintersteen's building is now completed, and is a great addition to the town. The steam heating apparatus has been put in by E. B. Brower and is in satisfactory operation. The rooms occupied by these gentlemen for law offices, are handsomely fitted up, and make as elegant and convenient rooms as are used by any lawyer in the county. The office of L. E. Waller, Esq., in the same building, is large, light and convenient. The hall on the third floor is a fine room for festivals, lectures, dances, &c., and no doubt will prove remunerative to the enterprising owners.

Preparing for the Holidays.

The windows of our merchants are beginning to assume a holiday appearance, as many of them are receiving their Christmas goods. Each year the display seems to surpass all former years, and everybody can find at home, suitable presents for the most fastidious, without sending abroad for them. Spend your Christmas money at home, and thus make two persons happy, the one for whom, and the one from whom you buy.

The Latest Swindle.

The newspapers have unearthed another swindle which took place in a neigboring county lately, and a farmer, as usual, the victim. This time a fellow comes along driving a shining rig, and sells carpets by the sample. He offers a three-ply ingrain at 37½ cents. The farmer selects the pattern he wants, the agent writes out the number of yards and the price; the farmer signs the order (?) and the next week he has a note in the bank to pay and he never sees or hears of a carpet man again.

Fire Department.

The Chief Engineer, First and Second Assistants, will be elected on Monday, December 18th, and will go into office on the first Monday in January. Each company elects an inspector to conduct the election, the President of the Town Council acting as Judge, and all to be sworn. The secretary of each company must furnish the secretary of the Fire Board on or before the second Monday in December, a roll of his company, containing the names of all who have been members for three months, paid the entrance fee, and are not more than three months in arrear on dues. It shall also contain any resignations, expulsions or deaths that have occurred during the year. These lists must be sworn to by the respective secretaries.

The Chief Engineer shall make a report to the Town Council at the December meeting of the condition of the department, and make such suggestions as he shall deem for the best interests of the department, and of the town. A regular meeting of the Fire Board will be held at Winona Hall on Tuesday, December 12th, at 8 p. m.

On Tuesday of last week a convention was held in the Opera House, in the interest of the constitutional amendment movement. There were representatives from Berwick, Briarcreek, Bloomsburg, Catawissa, Centre, Greenwood, Hemlock, Mt. Pleasant, Madison, Orange and Scott. The delegations from Berwick, Greenwood, Catawissa and Bloomsburg were quite large. The permanent officers of the convention were: President, Rev. W. M. Evans of Berwick; Vice-Presidents, Rev. S. Mitchell, D. D., of Bloomsburg; Mr. E. M. Tewksbury of Catawissa; Rev. A. N. Spear of Centre; Secretaries, Mr. C. H. Zehnder of Berwick; Rev F. P. Manhart of Bloomsburg; Treasurer, Mr. Aaron Smith of Hemlock. An executive committee, composed of one member from each voting district, was elected. This committee organized by electing M. P. Lutz of Bloomsburg, Chairman, Dr. Schuyler of Bloomsburg, Secretary and A. W. Spear of Centre, Treasurer. The convention resolved that this executive committee and their officers should constitute the officers of the Columbia County Prohibition Amendment Association auxiliary to the state association of which Ex-Chief Justice Agnew is President. The afternoon session was devoted entirely to business. There were about 225 persons present.

The evening meeting was attended by a large audience. Rev. Dr. Mitchell presided and made a brief address, Rev M. L. Smyser also spoke briefly but emphatically in support of the proposed amendment. Mrs. Annie Wittenmire of Philadelphia addressed the convention for more than an hour. Her address was a very able one. Her friends are justified in saying that she, Mrs. Foster and Miss Willard constitute a trio of American women, unequalled in eloquence and in successful work for humanity. One of the results of the convention will be a thorough canvas of the county for signatures to a petition in behalf of the proposed amendment. M.

Thursday evening, November 23, 1882, Daniel Fester, the oldest man in our township, died at the ripe old age of 84 years, 11 months, 13 days. The many friends of the deceased followed his remains to their final resting place in the Briarcreek cemetery, at the brick church, Sunday morning. Though he had no children he has been a fatherly friend to several young men who will ever stand ready to testify to his hospitality, kindness and inestimable worth. Among others was the Hon. A. J. Dietteich of Wilkesbarre, who found a home under the hospitable roof of this generous man, from infancy until he arrived at the age of about 18 years. It was of Judge Dietterich that the deceased said a short time ago:—"Aaron was my best boy."

To Samuel Jackson, whom he raised, and who lived with and cared for him till he died. Mr. Fester left his estate consisting of a little farm and some personalty. Many are the friends who will cherish tender recollections of this good old patriarch who has been called from time to eternity. REPORTER.

EXCURSION TO WILKES-BARRE.

After many years of adversity the North & West Branch railroad is at last completed, and was formally opened on Thursday of last week, by an excursion from Wilkesbarre to Sunbury and return, which was participated in by about 500 people living along the route. The excursion was under the management of Rev. D. J. Waller, Charles Parrish and H. W. Palmer, the committee on invitations, and everything was done by them that tended to the convenience and enjoyment of their guests. The train left Wilkesbarre at 8 o'clock in the morning with about 250 gentlemen of that city, and ran to Sunbury, arriving at about 11 o'clock. Here the party was largely augmented. Shortly after 11 o'clock the return trip was begun, and at Danville, Catawissa, Bloomsburg, Berwick, and other points delegations were taken up, and the six coaches of which the train was composed, were filled to overflowing. The new road follows the river on the left hand side, and the scenery from the cars cannot be surpassed anywhere. It was a subject of common remark that the track was as smooth as any old road, which speaks well for the contractors, the Messrs. Collins. The day was all that could be desired, and the trip was made to Wilkesbarre in good time, when the excursionists repaired to the Wyoming Valley House and partook of an elegant collation. After the viands had been fully discussed, Dr. W. H Bradley, of the Wilkesbarre Record called the meeting to order and stated that a series of resolutions relating to the occasion had been prepared, and he moved that they be read by J. K. Bogert, of the Wilkesbarre Leader. Mr. Bogert stepped forward and read the resolutions as follows:

RESOLVED, That as the invited guests of the North and West Branch railroad company, on the occasion of the opening of their new railroad, we desire to express to the officers and managers of that company our appreciation of their generous hospitality. Representing as we do nearly all of the professions, occupations and industries of the valleys of the Susquehanna, we rejoice at the completion of this new and important public improvement; and we congratulate ourselves that it is to be conducted and managed by men of large and enterprising views, whose record in the past is a full guarantee of their liberal policy in the future.

RESOLVED, That we congratulate our friend and former townsman, the Rev. D. J. Waller, on the realization of his purposes and hopes in the completing of the North & West Branch railroad. To him justly belongs the credit of originating and pushing forward this important public improvement. He has proved himself a steady and persistent worker in the vineyard of the state as well as of the church. He has been militant in both, and will triumph in both.

RESOLVED, That our thanks are due and are hereby tendered to Hon. H. W. Palmer, Charles Parrish, Esq., and the Rev. D. J. Waller, who, as a committee of arrangements, have been instrumental in their efforts to render this excursion pleasant and successful.

RESOLVED, That we thank Mr. Alfred Walters, superintendent of the road, the conductor, engineer and employees who had charge of the excursion train. Their fidelity to duty, watchfulness and regard for the comfort and safety of the guests are fully appreciated and thankfully acknowledged.

We toast a success to the North and West Branch railroad. May the Wallier never engurt her track, nor inflate her stock. May her enterprise and liberality Waller around through every channel and Parrish, her route re-Ward her treasury, and make her the Palmer in railroad excellency and esteem. May Nellson of us ever be Harrad-ed by li news of her, or through her.

When the reading was finished a motion for the adoption of the resolutions was put, which was carried unanimously and emphatically. Loud calls for Waller followed, and that gentleman responded very happily by saying that when he left that place fifty-two years ago and floated down the river on a shingle, he never expected to be carried back on a steel rail. Remarks were also made by Col. Taggart of Northumberland, Rev. I. H. Torrence of Riverside, and Attorney-General Palmer, all of which were received with loud applause.

At about four o'clock the train left Wilkesbarre, reaching Bloomsburg at about six o'clock. On the ferry boat a vote of thanks was extended by those present from Bloomsburg to Mr. Waller, and all who had taken an active interest in the new road, for the great advantages opened for our town.

For nearly fifteen years Mr. Waller has labored for this road. He met with obstacles and discouragement on almost every hand, but his indomitable energy and pluck carried him through, and his enjoyment on the occasion of opening the road showed clearly that he was very happy, and justly so, at the completion of his years of labor. Much credit must also be accorded Mr. William Neal for the success of the undertaking. When all others lost hope, he constantly aided Mr. Waller with his advice and means, and never doubted but that the road would be built. Such backing gave the president renewed hope and energy, and carried him through successfully. The road is now operated by the Pennsylvania company.

The following persons constituted the Bloomsburg delegation so far as we were able to ascertain them:

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Waller, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Waller, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. L. A. Shattuck, Mr. and Mrs. A. Z. Schoch, Judge and Mrs. Elwell, Dr. and Mrs. Schuyler, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Elwell, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Funston, Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Hartman, Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Miller, Col. and Mrs. S. Knorr, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Maize, William Neal, Mrs. W. H. McKinney, Miss Ella McKinney, Miss Laura Waller, Miss Pinneo, Revs. Donahue, Manhart and Speer, I. W. McKelvy, G. A. Clark, E. J. McHenry, D. McHenry, T. J. Vanderslice, Sylvester Pursel, J. L. Moyer, W. S. Moyer, W. M. Monroe, Mathias Shuffer, C. E. Savage, F. Eyer, W. Krickbaum, Douglas Hughes, E. C. Caswell, Dr. Ranson, and others.

Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the day, and all returned home delighted with their first trip up the other side of the Susquehanna on the cars.

"One Hundred Wives."

The authors of "One Hundred Wives" made a thorough study of Mormon history and a sweeping search of Mormon literature before writing their play, and it may be confidentially asserted that the terrors and infamies of Mormon life have been in nowise exaggerated. It was Joseph Smith, the original "prophet" of the Mormon religion, who first taught married women who came into the church that all former marriages were null and void, and that it was their duty to take new husbands from the Mormon fold. Women are also instructed that their hope of a queen's dowry in the Celestial Kingdom, depends upon their consenting that their husbands shall take other wives. This delusion is impressed upon the Mormon women to such a degree that many wifes are strong advocates of polygamy, and even urge plural marriages upon unwilling husbands. The doctrine of the "blood atonement" is historical, and Brigham Young publicly declared in one of his sermons that "blood should be spilled as a means of salvation," which became sufficient authority for murdering enemies of the church and pursuing those who disputed its authority. Those who believe that the horrors of Mormonism are things of the past need only be told that there were more polygamous marriages during the year 1880 than in any previous year of the Mormon Church! It is the aim and scope of the play of "One Hundred Wives" to rouse American indignation and excite the power of the Nation to wipe out this plague-spot upon American civilization.

This play will be given at the Opera House on Tuesday evening, December 5th, by a strong company. It has had very successful runs everywhere.

The Long Evenings.

HOW SHALL THEY BE PASSED TO THE PROFIT OF THE YOUNG.

That the long evenings of winter drag heavily upon the young, every one who has any recollection of his boyhood will admit. The young man will find means of amusement either at home or abroad. The social nature of the young cannot be ignored, but should be taken advantage of to inculcate good practices, if the development of bad ones would be avoided. There are thousands of young men who can just as well be trained up into the paths of virtue, honor and industry, as to be allowed to be caught in the meshes of the vile and dissolute. It is not that young men want to enter upon a questionable life; but there is an excessive restlessness in their make up, which cannot be controlled by compelling them to sit at home in the evening sucking their thumbs, or reading long disquisitions on religious subjects, or listening to tedious lectures on moral questions. If mothers would rear their sons, says Appleton's Journal, so that their homes are associated with the repression of natural instincts, you will be sure to throw them in the society that in any measure can supply the need of their hearts. They will not go to the public houses, at first, for love of liquor—very few people like the taste of liquor; they go for the animated and hilarious companionship they find there, which they discover does so much to repress the disturbing restlessness in their breasts. See to it, then, that their homes compete in attractiveness with public places. Open your blinds by day and light bright fires at night. Illuminate your rooms; hang pictures upon the wall. Put books and newspapers upon your table. Have music and entertaining games. Banish demons of dullness and apathy that have so long ruled in your household, and bring in mirth and good cheer. Invent occupations for your sons. Stimulate their ambitions in worthy directions. While you make home their delight, fill them with higher purposes than mere pleasure. Whether they shall pass happy boyhood, and enter upon manhood with refined tastes and noble ambitions, depends on you. Do not blame others if your sons miscarry. Believe it possible that with exertion and right means, a mother may have more control over the destiny of her boys than any other influence whatever.

Some of the gentlemen connected with the new railroad had a banquet at the Exchange Hotel on Tuesday evening, prior to their final departure from this place. A number of their friends were invited and a very pleasant evening was spent. The supper was one of those for which the Exchange has become famous, and everything was served in the highest style of the culinary art. There are but few hotels in the state that can surpass this one, and very few landlords that are more popular than Mr. Tubbs.

The great superiority of DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP over all other cough remedies is attested by the immense popular demand for that old established remedy.

"Unbidden guests are often welcomest when they are gone." Disease is an unbidden guest which Kidney-Wort almost invariably "shows the door." Here is a case in point: "Mother has recovered," wrote an Illinois girl to her Eastern relatives. "She took bitters for a long time but without any good. So when she heard of the virtues of Kidney-Wort she got a box and it completely cured her, so that she can do as much work now as she could before we moved West. Since she got well every one about here is taking it."

DESERVEDLY POPULAR.

Unless it had great merit Parker's Ginger Tonic could not be so popular. Its sale has spread remarkably everywhere, because invalids find it gives them new life and vigor when other medicines fail entirely.—Ohio Farmer.

A Minister's Escape.

FROM THE ASYLUM TO THE BOSOM OF HIS HOME—HOW IT WAS DONE.

A prominent minister residing at the east has just made the following statement, which is herewith reprinted entire:

To the Editor of the Herald:

I have always shrunk from appearing prominently before the public, but a sense of the duty I owe humanity and the world prompts me to ask this opportunity for making a brief statement in your paper.

Whether it be true with others I cannot say, but during my entire life I have frequently been conscious that something was slowly and silently working to undermine my health and life. What it was I could not tell, but that some enemy of my being was devouring me within I was certain. At times I would seem comparatively well and then I would be attacked with the most distressing symptoms. I would feel peculiar pains in various parts of my body, my head would seem heavy; my respiration labored; my appetite would be ravenous one day and I would loathe food the day following. Then again I would lose all interest in life; would feel weary without exertion; would become sleepy at mid-day and restless at night. Occasionally my breathing would be labored and my heart almost motionless, while at other times it would palpitate violently. I thought these troubles were the result of malaria, and I treated them accordingly, but I got no better. Shortly afterward my stomach became deranged, my food failed to digest, and the fluids I passed were of a peculiar odor and color. And yet I did not realize that these things meant anything serious. Finally I consulted a number of eminent physicians, each one of whom took a different view as to the cause of my troubles. One said I was suffering from brain disease; another spinal difficulty; others heart affection, kidney disease, etc. My symptoms were terrible, and in the hope of relief, I was cauterized, cupped, blistered and subjected to almost every known form of treatment. During one of these attacks, while at Red Bank, N. J., a physician was called, and left a prescription. After he had gone, I requested a friend to go and ask him what he thought of my trouble. The reply was: "Oh, he will be all right in a few days; it is only an attack of delirium tremens." He was at once informed that this was impossible, as I had never used any kind of intoxicating drinks; whereupon he returned, made inquiries, and changed his prescription. But all the care of my friends and physicians availed nothing. I grew worse constantly, and what is most terrible to think, I did not know what ailed me, nor could I find any one who did.

During the summer and fall of last year my pulse ranged from 120 to 130 per minute; I had no relish for food, and was indeed a most pitiable object. I continued in this state until last December, when I became unconscious and lost my reason, though I had two physicians in whom myself and friends placed implicit confidence. In this condition I was taken to Brattleboro, Vt., for the purpose of being placed in the insane asylum. I remained there until last April, being attended all the while by my faithful wife who never left me and believed that some disease and not insanity was the cause of all my trouble. I regained consciousness in March last and insisted upon being taken home. The physicians advised that I remain, but I insisted upon leaving, and we began the journey, traveling slowly. I was met at the dock by a friend whom I recognized and then I became again unconscious and remained so for over a week. When I once more recognized my friend and knew my surroundings I determined to try, as a last resort, a treatment of which I had heard much but knew nothing. Neither myself nor friends had much faith that it or anything could help me, but we resolved to try. We accordingly dismissed the physicians, gave up all other remedies, and I rejoice to say that with the blessing of Him who guided us, I am to day a well man; having not been so vigorous for many years, and I owe it all to the wonderful, almost miraculous, power of Warner's Safe Kidney Cure, the remedy which I used.

You can well imagine how grateful I feel under the circumstances, and, like a new convert, I earnestly desire that all who are suffering should know and avail themselves of this means of recovery. Had it not been for the remedy above named I should doubtless now be within the walls of an asylum or in my grave. The great trouble with my case was that no one seemed to know what I was afflicted with, and I am positive that thousands of people in America today are in the same or similar condition and do not know its cause. Kidney troubles are the most deceptive of all diseases. They have no symptoms of their own, but often show the symptoms of nearly every known complaint. I know that people are dying every day from supposed consumption, apoplexy, heart disease, spinal complaint, and many other diseases, when, could the real cause be known, it would be found to originate in the kidneys. In their advanced stages kidney troubles are the most terrible of all known maladies, as my own experience can fully verify. That I had Bright's disease of the kidneys there can be no doubt. That the symptoms were those of many other diseases is equally certain, and that I was doomed to a terrible death had I not been saved as I was, I am positive. The following letters just received confirm this:

VERMONT ASYLUM FOR THE INSANE, Brattleboro, Vermont, Oct. 30, 1882.

Rev E. D. Hopkins:

Dear Sir:—Yours of the 21st inst. received. We congratulate you not only upon the continuance of your health, but also upon its apparent continual improvement. Few persons, I think, have passed through so exhausting an experience as you and rallied from it. Certainly I cannot recall one who came to us in so critical, and for days and even weeks in so hopeless a state for amendment as you, and who survived and recovered from it; for, I think, you may now consider yourself recovered and no longer on the convalescent list. Hoping for the continuance of your present health, with the best wishes from all here,

I am, yours truly,
J. DRAPER.

OCEANIC, N. J., Nov. 2, 1882.

My Dear Friend:—Replying to your letter I would say, I have been acquainted with my highly valued friend, the Rev. S. D. Hopkins about eighteen months, and very intimately acquainted for about six months past. For a little more than five months he was an inmate of my house, and we enjoyed constant intercourse with each other. When he came in April last he was almost a perfect wreck in point of health. I thought he had come to us but to die. Soon afterwards he began the use of some of H. H. Warner & Co's remedies, namely: the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, Safe Nervine and Safe Pills. From almost the time he began their use his improvement was very marked and wonderful, and when he left us, after having taken some two dozen bottles, he was like a new man. The change was the most remarkable I ever witnessed.

SAMUEL MILLER,
(Pastor of the Presbyterian Church.)

In view, therefore, of these facts and with a hope that all who read this may take timely warning, I make this open statement freely and for the good of my fellow men. Sincerely,

(REV.) E. D. HOPKINS.

East Richford, Vt., Nov. 7, 1882.

A Somnambulist's Dream.

HE NIGHTLY RE-ENACTS THE MURDER WITH WHICH HE IS CHARGED.

In the Davidson county jail is confined a man on the charge of murder, whose name will not be mentioned, the American not wishing to prejudice the case. The prisoner in question is given to somnambulistic habits. When the bells of the city usher in midnight the prisoner arises from his couch in a stealthy and noiseless manner, creeps out of the door of the cell and scrutinizes the hall, or as much of it as can be seen through the door, and also every corner of the narrow apartment, as if intent upon satisfying himself that no one is in the vicinity. He then proceeds to take a cotton shirt and fills the body of it with the covering of the bed, also stuffing the arms full. He places this in one corner on a chair, and puts upon the top of it a hat. Having arranged this to suit him, the somnambulist, with noiseless tread, walks over to a place where a broom is kept, and grasps it as if it were a gun, creeps with a cat like tread upon the figure in the chair. The manoeuver consumes considerable time, the "sleeper" apparently acting as if he was engaged in picking his way through brush or low timber.

Having arrived at a point from which a good view can be commanded he coolly and deliberately raises the broom in right angles to his shoulder. After taking a long aim he goes through the same motion that one would in firing a gun. He then approaches the chair, picks up the "dummy" and carries it to the remote corner of the cell. He then goes down on all fours and goes through the motion of digging with his hands. Having dug until the hole is large enough he places the stuffed shirt in it and carefully covers it up, stamping the floor of the cell as if he was pressing down uneven ground. He then scatters over it an armful of leaves, which he goes through the process of gathering from the different portions of his cell.

The work concluded to his satisfaction, the sleep-walker conceals the broom under his bed, as if hiding a gun. He then washes his hands, examines his clothes carefully, as if to see if there was any blood upon them, resorts again to his couch, to sleep quietly until morning. The prisoner, when informed of this strange freak in his waking moments, denies all knowledge of the occurrence.—Ex.

When is wolf most dangerous? When he feels sheepish.

FROM EMPORIUM.

Geo. Dodge, Sr., a well-known citizen of Emporium, writes that one of his men (Sam Lewis) whilst working in the woods so severely sprained his ankle that he could scarcely get home, but after one or two applications of Thomas' Eclectric Oil, he was able to go to work next day.

Why is the money you are in the habit of giving to the poor like a newborn babe? Because it's precious little.

VISIBLE IMPKONEG&NA

Mr. Noah Bates, Elmira, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I had an attack of bilious fever, and never fully recovered. My digestive organs were weakened, and I would be completely prostrated for days. After using Burdock Blood Bitters the improvement was so visible that I was astonished. I can now, though 61 years of age, do a fair and reasonable day's work." Price 1,00.

THE IDIOT EARL.

Connected with the Duke's residence in Queensberry House, against which the whole fury and maledictions of the mob were directed at the time of the union, there is a tale of awful mystery and horror. His eldest son, James, Earl of Drumlanrig, is simply stated in the old peerage "to have died young." It is now proved, however, that he was an idiot of the most wretched kind, rabid and gluttonous as a wild animal, and grew to an enormous stature, as his leaden and unornamented coffin in the family vault at Durisdeer attests at this day. This monstrous and unfortunate creature was always confined in a ground-floor room of the western wing of Queensberry House, and "until these few years the boards still remained by which the windows of the dreadful receptacle were darkened, to prevent the idiot from looking out or being seen."

On the day the treaty of union was passed all Edinburgh crowded to the vicinity of the Parliament House to wait the issue of the final debate; and the whole household of the Duke—the high commissioner—went thither en masse for that purpose, and, perhaps, to prevent him from being torn to pieces by the exasperated people, and among them went the valet whose duty it was to watch and attend the Earl of Drumlanrig. Hearing all unusually still in the vast house, the latter contrived to break out of his den, and roamed wildly from room to room, till certain savory odors drew him into the great kitchen, where a little turnspit sat quietly on a stool by the fire. He seized the boy, took the meat from the fire, stripped and spitted him, and he was found devouring the half-roasted body when the Duke returned with his train from his political triumph to find dire horror awaiting him.

The common people, among whom the dreadful tale soon spread, in spite of the Duke's endeavors to suppress it, said that it was a judgment upon him for his odious share in the union. The story runs that the Duke, who had previously regarded his offspring with no eye of affection, immediately ordered the creature to be smothered. But this is a mistake; the idiot is known to have died in England, and to have survived his father many years, though he did not succeed him upon his death in 1711, when the titles devolved upon Charles, a younger brother.—Cassell's Old and New Edinburgh.

We detest vanity in others, because we have got so much of it ourselves.

Prof. Phelps thus raps the crying clergyman: "Tears are sometimes nothing but a nervous luxury. In a public speaker tears are an infirmity to be got rid of, never a gift to be vain of." His advice to weeping clergymen is excellent: "Use tonics; study mathematics; take the fresh air; take the saddle."

AN EGYPTIAN VILLAGE.

A village consists of a number of cubes, parallelopipeds and other rectangular shapes that answer for habitations. This geometrical architecture is followed, I suppose, in memory of Euclid, who was a native of Egypt.

These rectilineal houses are built mostly of mud or mud bricks, and have a doorway and several other small openings in the side walls. I observed some of them were constructed of palm branches interwoven and plastered also with mud. At any rate, one these villages looks more like a geological formation than a human one. One of them in particular that I passed some fifty miles from Alexandria, looks like a landscape from the terrace epoch.

Most of these communities are situated beside a pool of stagnated water. This site, I suppose, is especially chosen as it affords easy means of getting water for culinary purposes. As the rate of speed on the Alexandria and Cairo railway is rather slow, I many times caught a glimpse of a maiden standing on the banks of one of these miasmatic pools doing a little washing. They used for the purpose large shallow stone bowls. In some instances the water is led about the place in a ditch; in others I saw girls carrying water to the village in large stoneware vessels, generally upon their heads. The sunny part of the town is patronized during the winter season by the male portion of the inhabitants, who do a fair amount of sleeping.

Life is, however, better displayed upon the roof. This is the general camping-ground for both animals and inanimate objects. There are innumerable siestas, commencing at sunrise and prolonged till sunset. The matron hangs her clothes here, attaching one end of the line to the chimney and the other end to one of the male sleepers. The dogs retire here after eating till they are stupid from a carcass that lies near the house. The cat and dog are here on good terms, which was probably not the case an hour before in the space about the carcass. The chickens and goats occupy that part of the roof not occupied by the sleepers.

One thing I never remember to have seen on the roof, and that is the Arab's patient little donkey.

The canine portion of these communities may be divided into those that are white and those that are black. If the white dogs are in the minority at any particular time, they are very promiscuously chewed by the blacks, and vice versa. A canine color feud!

ABSENCE OF MIND IN DETROIT.

Yesterday forenoon a citizen who was flurried and angry entered a grocery store on Antoine street and called out to the owner:

"Why do you keep a dog around here to eat folks up?"

"Didt my dog eat you oop?" was the innocent query in reply.

"Not quite; but he tore my coat half off my back, and you've got to pay for it."

"How much?"

"Well, it will cost as much as $2 to get it repaired. You'll either pay it or I'll have the dog shot."

"Oh, I'll pay dot," said the grocer, and he did, but the man was hardly out of sight before he jumped a foot high and called out:

"Dunder and blitzen, but I vhas der greatest shackass in America! Why, I sells dot dog to my fader-in-law more as six weeks ago."

Happiness is everywhere, or nowhere, and those who don't hunt for it, find the most of it.
